

Notes on Contributors

Jane Bridgeman is Associate Lecturer in Fashion History and Theory at Central St Martin's College of Art, London.

H.C. Carron is Librarian at Emmanuel College Cambridge and has research interests in medieval literature, history, bibliography, and a special research interest in thirteenth century Iceland.

Wendy R. Childs is Emerita Professor of Late Medieval History in the School of History, University of Leeds. She has written extensively on England's international trade in the late Middle Ages.

Anne Crawford is Archivist to Wells Cathedral. Her most recent books are The Yorkists: The History of a Dynasty (2007) and Yorkist Lord: John Howard, Duke of Norfolk (2010).

Clifford S.J. Davies is Emeritus Fellow of Wadham College, Oxford. He is currently exploring the implications of his realisation that the word 'Tudor' was scarcely used in the 'Tudor period'.

Heather Falvey tutors the Society's Palaeography-by-Post course and is a member of both the Bulletin and Research sub-committees. Her PhD was on custom, resistance and politics in early modern England.

Peter Foss read English at Oxford. Born in Leicester, he has published on Leicestershire history and twentieth-century literature, including Llewelyn Powys, the subject of his PhD.

James A. Galloway is a Visiting Research Fellow at the Institute of Historical Research, University of London. He has published widely on the economic and environmental history of medieval England.

Peter Hammond, President of the Society, Research Officer until 2001. He is the author/editor of books on late fifteenth-century history, including the battle of Bosworth.

Alison Hanham is a retired Associate Professor in History at Massey University, New Zealand.

Michael Hicks, Professor, Winchester University. Published Warwick the Kingmaker (1998), False Fleeting Perjur'd Clarence (2013), Edward IV, Edward V, Richard III, Anne Neville, and The Wars of the Roses (2010).

Michael Jones, Correspondant de l'Institut, Emeritus Professor of Medieval French History, University of Nottingham, taught a Special Subject on 'The Wars of the Roses' for many years.

Hannes Kleineke is Senior Research Fellow at the History of Parliament. He is the author of Parliamentarians at Law (Wiley-Blackwell 2008) and Edward IV (Routledge 2009).

A.J. Pollard is emeritus professor of Teesside University. A third edition of his Wars of the Roses is to be published this year as will a short life of Henry V.

Nigel Ramsay is a senior research fellow in the School of Law, Exeter University, and is engaged in editing the medieval records of the Court of Chivalry for publication by the Selden Society.

James Ross is a senior medieval specialist at the National Archives. He is the author of John de Vere, Thirteenth Earl of Oxford, 1442–1513, Woodbridge 2011.

Livia Visser-Fuchs is writing a book on Jean de Wavrin's historical work.

THE RICHARD III AND YORKIST HISTORY TRUST
THE MERCHANT TAYLORS' COMPANY OF LONDON: COURT MINUTES
1486–1493

Edited and Introduced by Matthew Davies

ISBN 1-900289-36-9 352 pages; illustrations and tables

Among the extensive records of the Merchant Taylors' Company of London is a remarkable series of early 'court minutes', proceedings of the Company's governing body, still known today as the Court of Assistants. The minutes which cover the years from 1486 to 1493, convey a vivid and detailed picture of the life of the Merchant Taylors' Company at the end of the fifteenth century. In accounts of more than 400 meetings of the court, the tailors of London are shown electing their Master and Wardens, presenting apprentices, disputing vigorously with their fellow members, enforcing discipline, and making payments for religious services and their almsmen and women. The minutes also reveal the part played by the tailors in the wider life of the City of London, through their dealings with other crafts, the city, government and the Crown. These records are an invaluable source for historians of London and of late-medieval urban society in general and are edited here for the first time. This edition provides a fully translated and annotated version of the text, and includes an extensive introduction, appendices, and a combined index of individuals and subjects.

Available to members for £18 plus £5.50 (UK) postage and packing
from the Sales Office